TVPoll.com performs its survey research using an automated polling methodology for television stations nationwide.

While this method of data collection may differ from traditional public opinion pollsters who use live operator call centers, the automated survey process is identical and performs better in reducing common errors such as interviewer data entry errors, and bias such as interviewer bias. We use a single, digitally-recorded voice to conduct our interviews which insures that every respondent hears exactly the same question, from exactly the same voice, asked with the exact same inflection every single time. The poll's introduction is in the voice of one of the television station's well-known anchors, which can increase poll participation beyond that of traditional pollsters.

After the calls are completed, the data is processed through statistical software and weighted to insure that the sample reflects the overall population in terms of age, race, gender, political party, geography and other factors.

In an effort to provide the best research, TVPoll.com presents the following information in accordance with the Best Practices for Survey and Public Opinion Research, established by the American Association for Public Opinion Research (AAPOR).

Disclose all methods of the survey to permit evaluation and replication.

Excellence in survey practice requires that survey methods be fully disclosed and reported in sufficient detail to permit replication by another researcher and that all data (subject to appropriate safeguards to maintain privacy and confidentiality) be fully documented and made available for independent examination. Good professional practice imposes an obligation upon all survey and public opinion researchers to include, in any report of research results, or to make available when that report is released, certain minimal essential information about how the research was conducted to ensure that consumers of survey results have an adequate basis for judging the reliability and validity of the results reported.

Exemplary practice in survey research goes beyond such standards for "minimal disclosure," promulgated by the AAPOR and several other professional associations (e.g., CASRO and NCPP) by:

- (a) describing how the research was done in sufficient detail that a skilled researcher could repeat the study, and
- (b) making data available for independent examination and analysis by other responsible parties (with appropriate safeguards for privacy concerns).

A comprehensive list of the elements proposed for disclosure by one or more sources which in combination, exceed the "standards for minimum disclosure" proposed by any one of the professional organizations includes:

1. Who sponsored the survey, and who conducted it;
Sponsored by KWTW, News 9 and conducted by TVPoll.com.
2. The purpose of the study, including specific objectives;
Test statewide ballots, Bush and Henry approval as well as I stook favorable.
3. The questionnaire and/or the exact, full wording of all questions asked, including any visual exhibits and the text of any preceding instruction or explanation to the interviewer or respondents that might reasonably be expected to affect the response;
Provided in this report.
4. A definition of the universe the population under study which the survey is intended to represent, and a description of the sampling frame used to identify this population (including its source and likely bias);
Likely general voters registered to vote in the state of Oklahoma.
5. A description of the sample design, including cluster size, number of callbacks, information on eligibility criteria and screening procedures, method of selecting sample elements, mode of data collection, and other pertinent information;
Five callbacks to all non-connects; screened for voter registration; data collection by recorded call.
6. A description of the sample selection procedure, giving a clear indication of the methods by which respondents were selected by the researcher, or

- whether the respondents were entirely self-selected, and other details of how the sample was drawn in sufficient detail to permit fairly exact replication;
Those selected were determined at random using a computerized calculation of our voter database's "likely voters".
7. Size of samples and sample disposition the results of sample implementation, including a full accounting of the final outcome of all sample cases: e.g., total number of sample elements contacted, those not assigned or reached, refusals, terminations, non-eligibles, and completed interviews or questionnaires;
Provided upon request.
8. Documentation and a full description, if applicable, of any response or completion rates cited (for quota designs, the number of refusals), and (whenever available) information on how non respondents differ from respondents;
Provided upon request.
9. A description of any special scoring, editing, data adjustment or indexing procedures used;
None.
10. A discussion of the precision of findings, including, if appropriate, estimates of sampling error with references to other possible sources of error so that a misleading impression of accuracy or precision is not conveyed and a description of any weighting or estimating procedures used;
Data was weighted by sex and congressional district.
11. A description of all percentages on which conclusions are based;
Valid percent used based on total sample.
12. A clear delineation of which results are based on parts of the sample, rather than on the total sample;
Respondents identifying themselves as unlikely to vote was removed from the final dataset (Question 16); only completed surveys were accepted.
13. Method(s), location(s), and dates of interviews, fieldwork or data collection;
Data collected by recorded call on October 6-7, 2006.
14. Interviewer characteristics;
Female, age 40, mid-western voice.
15. Copies of interviewer instructions or manuals, validation results, codebooks, and other important working papers; and Instructions and manuals provided upon request.
16. Any other information that a layperson would need to make a reasonable assessment of the reported findings.
None.
